Flash Flood Watch Through 7 AM Friday

Flash Flood Watch

Streets in urban areas such as Abilene, San Angelo, Brady, Sweetwater, Brownwood, and Junction may become impassable.

Flash flooding may develop across low water crossings and other flood prone locations.

Creeks and streams may fill with swiftly flowing floodwaters

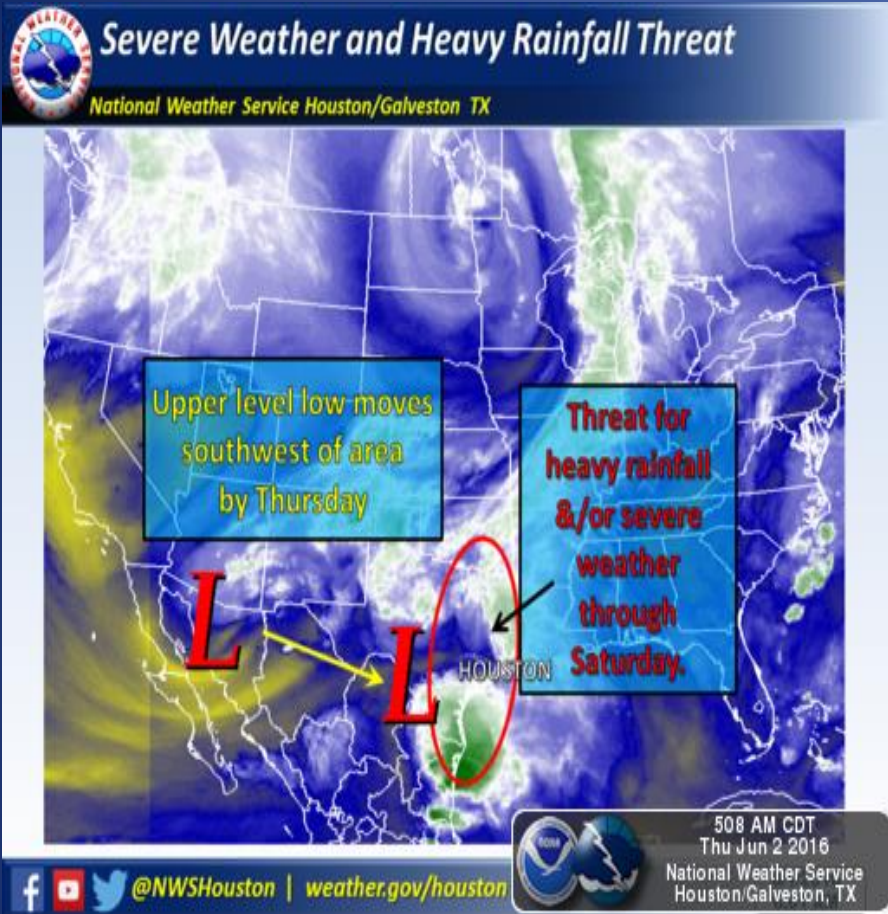

NWS San Angelo

Periods of showers with a few thunderstorms can be expected today, as an upper low impacts the area. As the low moves east later this afternoon, rain chances will taper off, and there could be some clearing out over the Rio Grande Plains late. Still, with additional average rainfall amounts of 1 to 2 inches still possible today, a Flash Flood Watch remains in effect through tonight, especially with a boundary near the area. Highs today will range from 80 to 85 with light winds.

A Flash Flood Watch is in effect until 7 AM CDT Friday morning. Remain alert for rapidly rising water and never drive your vehicle into flood water. Turn around, don't drown.

Hazardous Weather

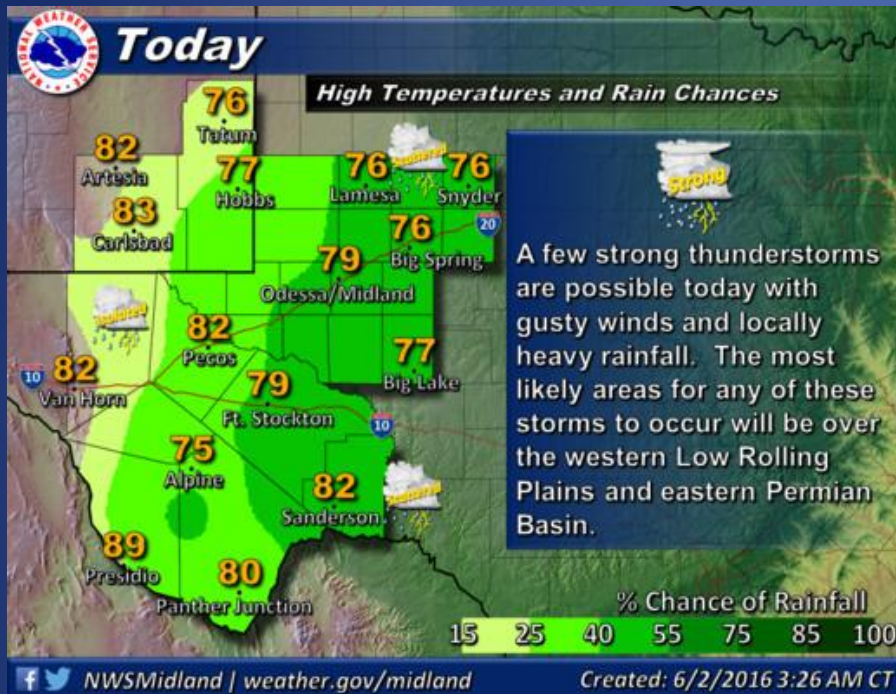

The heavy rain and severe weather threat returns to the area over the next few days. An upper level low will position itself over south central Texas and disturbances will rotate around and to the east of this feature. A highly moist and unstable resident air mass will only fuel future storms in producing high rainfall rates (flooding) and wind (downed trees, home/business damage) as they pass across southeastern Texas from as early as today through the weekend.

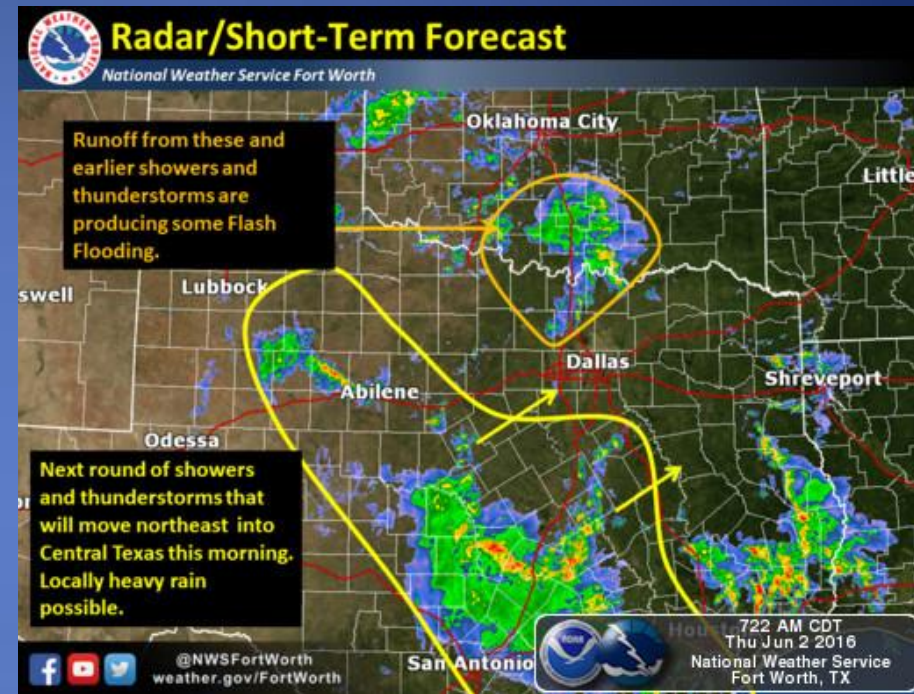

Locally heavy rainfall and flash flooding will be possible Today through Saturday. The heaviest rainfall will occur today, although additional pockets will be possible Friday and Saturday.

Hazardous Weather

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected to develop across southeast New Mexico and west Texas today. A few of the storms could be strong enough to produce gusty winds and heavy rainfall, but mainly over the western Low Rolling Plains and eastern Permian Basin

At 720 AM, an area of showers and thunderstorms north of a Jacksboro to Greenville line continue to move north. Although the heaviest rain had moved into southern Oklahoma, runoff from earlier heavy rain will result in some flooding. A Flash Flood Warning remains in effect for Montague and Cooke Counties until 945 AM. Area Flood Warnings remain in effect for Hood County until 1015 AM and for the northern parts of Young and Jack Counties until Noon. An area of showers and thunderstorms that extended from west of Abilene southeast through the Hill Country will move northeast in the western part of North Texas and much of Central Texas this morning. Locally heavy rain that may lead to flash flooding will be the main threat.
